

New stage in Viet Nam

by Tran Tu

It will be an historic occasion on January 27, 1973, when the Foreign Ministers representing the four governments at the Paris Conference on Viet Nam sign the Agreement on Ending the War and Restoring Peace in Viet Nam. It will be an unforgettable moment that has long been awaited by all the people of the world, especially the Vietnamese people, who have fought bravely and valiantly for the last 12 years in their long and victorious struggle for peace, independence, and freedom.

The Agreement could have come sooner, and much bloodshed could have been avoided if Nixon had come to grips with reality sooner. The overall political atmosphere inside the U.S., and as well, world public opinion dictated that the sooner the U.S. got out of the Indochina quagmire the better.

Unfortunately, Nixon tried to ignore this fact. Hiding under the so-called protests of the Saigon administration, which is but a creation of successive U.S. administrations, Nixon tried to prolong and intensify the war in order to gain a "position of strength" at the negotiating table and dreamt of maintaining a South Viet Nam in the orbit of U.S. colonialism.

But all his strategies, from "Vietnamization" to "re-americanization" to carpet bombings with B-52s did not get Nixon anywhere. On the contrary, the world public—especially the American people—became more indignant and demanded that the U.S. sign the Agreement. On the Vietnamese side, the people in both the North and the South displayed unshakable firmness in the face of terror bombings, while the negotiators gave proof of realism and flexibility, successfully reconciling the requirements of peace, independence, and national accord. Under these circumstances, the peace Agreement, which is not very different from the October Agreement, has come into being.

The Agreement, on the one hand, gives the U.S. an honorable way out of the battlefield of Viet Nam: in 60 days while the U.S. forces withdraw from Viet Nam, all prisoners of war will be released. On the other hand, the Agreement respects the independence, self-determination, sovereignty and national integrity of Viet Nam—those principles the Vietnamese people have fought for during the last 30 years. The Agreement also takes into account the actual situation in South Viet Nam where there exist two administrations, two armies, together with other political forces, and it points out correctly that the most sensitive question of "who will govern South Viet Nam" cannot be imposed from without but must be settled by the Vietnamese people in the spirit of national reconciliation and national concord.

The agreement, thus, is a significant step towards a stable peace in Viet Nam and it will, hopefully, contribute to the preservation of lasting peace in Indochina. But, by itself, the signing of the agreement is not peace. Peace can last and the Agreement will not be a smokescreen for the continuation of fire, bombs, and bullets if, and only if, the accords of the Agreement will be seriously respected by all parties. From the Vietnamese side, both Vietnamese governments, the Democratic Republic of Viet Nam and the Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Viet Nam, have solemnly promised that the peace treaty will be carried out seriously and all requirements of the peace agreement will be fulfilled.

But on the U.S. side, all initial reports indicate gloomy prospects for peace. After the ceasefire, the U.S. 7th Fleet will remain off the coast of Viet Nam and the U.S. air force headquarters will be moved to their air bases in Thailand. This will constitute a constant and direct threat to the Vietnamese people and could be used by the U.S., Nixon has publicly stated, to impose the will of the U.S. on the Vietnamese people.

In Saigon, Nguyen Van Thieu, tried to reject his responsibilities by saying that he could not guarantee peace 100%. Meanwhile, the U.S. air force and navy continue their massive and bar-

Native peoples vs. James Bay Project

(APLQ)—The struggle of Quebec Indians and Inuit against the James Bay Project took on a new dimension last week.

On January 16, George Manuel, President of the Canadian Indian Brotherhood, which has 250,000 members, declared that the Indians and Inuit of Quebec will not fight alone against the James Bay Development Corporation and the Quebec government, and that all the Indians of Canada are in solidarity with the Struggle.

This support has no clear form at the moment, but the Brotherhood is very well organized, particularly in the West.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Ministry of Indian Affairs, William McKim, revealed a disturbing fact last week: no treaty of cession of territory had been signed between the 6,000 Indians and Inuit of the Ungava Bay district and any government, with one exception: a band of Indians in the Abitibi region signed a treaty with the government of Quebec. This means that the Indians have the right to demand half the territory of Quebec.

It must be remembered, however, that up to now the Indians have demanded their right to the use of these territories, and not the right to the ownership of the land.

Another important testimony came up during the course of the Quebec Superior Court hearings on the native peoples' demand for an injunction against work on the James Bay Project.

It was furnished by Carleton University anthropologist Harley Feiffe, who in 1968 and 1969 studied the life and customs of the inhabitants of the Quebec North. He gave evidence about the composition of annual revenues of 3200 Indians and Inuit. Ten percent of these revenues came from the sale of furs, 9.6 percent from trade with the Hudson's Bay Company, 8 percent in miscellaneous payments, 20 percent in salaries, and 52.1 percent directly from the fruits of hunting and fishing.

This evidence clearly indicates the catastrophic consequences of a modification in the hunting and fishing territories. At the least, a people would be condemned to living on social welfare.

Meanwhile, life goes on quietly for the James Bay Development Corporation. To ensure "order" and "security" in the territory, the Corporation has just hired 13 policemen.

Immigration policy discussed

"Canada's development has been dependent on immigrant labour," stated Bernard Mergler, a Montreal lawyer, one of three speakers addressing a gathering of the Caribbean Students' Society last night.

Mergler explained that he has been helping immigrants here with problems they encounter as a result of Canada's new immigration policy. He then proceeded to describe the history of Canada's immigration laws.

"The laws hadn't changed for 200 years," he said. The landed immigrant status granted to people on arrival in Canada was considered to be a loophole by many, but it was "just part of the law".

The new regulations, which went into effect on November 3, 1972, permits an immigration officer to expel a visitor who he thinks plans to stay permanently. Mergler said that several "reactionary, chauvinistic, racist politicians" had complained that Canada's high unemployment rate is due to immigrants' "taking away the jobs". The new regulations were thus brought in to satisfy racist demands, and, as Mergler explained, "racism is part of our profit system."

The second speaker, a member of a Haitian organization helping immigrants, expressed some of his fears for immigrants.

He pointed out the amount of harassment the average Haitian wanting to immigrate must go through on arrival in Canada. He is forced to surrender his passport to the immigration authorities and is subject to return to the airport for further questioning.

The speaker expressed hope for immigrants who request political asylum, saying that the Canadian Court of Appeals, as a judicial body separate from the government, has been considerate in cases where the immigrant is in danger of political persecution upon return to Haiti.

Subir Roy, the final speaker, described his experiences and that of others at the hands of the Canadian immigration system. He added that although the government claims to be ridding the country of "criminal elements", its new policy is actually racist.

Following the talks, Mergler asked the audience for some ideas on what steps can be taken to help change the new regulations. Informing the public about the true nature of the new policy was a common suggestion.

Handle with care

Sir,
Following the recent disaster in the capital city of Nicaragua, Managua, a group of concerned students at McGill has established a campaign to obtain funds for relief operations. Presently, such programmes are being carried on by The Red Cross, Oxfam, Unicef, and several other international charitable organizations. Here at McGill, students have set up counters in all major buildings with donation buckets. All concerned people are asked to contribute generously. Blitzing will also be carried out on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, January 24-26. Also planned is a rock benefit concert to be held in the Union Ballroom this Sunday, Jan. 28th. Admissions would be 99c.

But we have a problem. The Union Ballroom is reserved by the McGill Student Movement (MSM) for a conference. They were approached and asked for their co-operation in this humanitarian effort. They refused. Asked to justify their anti-people attitude, they have yet to give a more reasonable answer than "we are holding a conference". Knowing that the average attendance to their conferences can be easily accommodated in much smaller rooms, we have asked them to accept several other available rooms. It seems to them that a conference on "The Correct Handling of Contradiction Among the People under the Condition of

The Dictatorship of "The Bourgeoisie" is more important than helping the families of 30,000 dead. What irony, to see such an attitude from people who are always such "crusaders" against suffering and oppression. What hypocrisy!

We suggest that the name of the conference be changed to "The Correct Handling of Contradiction among the People under the Conditions of the Dictatorship of the MSM". We again plead for their co-operation and that of the McGill population in this desperate cause. Please.

Many thanks.

Karate or genocide?

Sir,
On the morning of January 23 an article appeared in Bruce Taylor's column in the Gazette concerning a karate demonstration at McGill. No mention of the demonstration was made in the Daily of the same date. Is it necessary for McGill students to read the Gazette to find out what is happening at McGill? I would appreciate it if the Daily staff could pay more attention to McGill students and less to the war in Vietnam.

G. McWalter
Chem Eng. U3

Ed. note: Just because the Gazette devotes pages and pages to sports and only paragraphs (if that) to genocide is no reason for the Daily to follow suit. The karate demonstration was indeed mentioned in the Today column of the January 23rd Daily, and a front page photo in yesterday's edition.

Viet Nam...

baric bombing and shelling over South Viet Nam and the Saigon regime is employing terrorist activities in its scheme to grab more territory until January 27, the beginning of the ceasefire. The Saigon police machine is also shifting into high gear and is attempting to liquidate all Vietnamese persons suspected of patriotism and loving peace. Hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese political prisoners are still lying in tiger cages in such notorious prisons as Chi Hoa, Thu Duc, Poulo Condor...and their destinies are in the hands of blood-thirsty murderers of the Saigon regime. Hundreds of them have been assassinated, and thousands more have been added to the already lengthy list of prisoners, since the rumor of peace began in October.

This evidence clearly indicates that the maintaining of peace cannot be trusted in the hands of Nixon and Thieu. In signing the agreement, Nixon is trying to avoid the total collapse of the U.S. position in Viet Nam and to escape the world public reaction. But he has not abandoned the objective of imposing U.S. domination over the Vietnamese people. As history has proved, Nixon will try by all means to sabotage peace.

Peace in Vietnam hence becomes a challenge to the Vietnamese people and all peace-loving people in the world. Peace will last only if we vigilantly demand that the Nixon administration strictly adhere to the accords of the agreement that have been agreed upon.

The peace agreement is not an end, but only a beginning. It is a beginning for the Vietnamese people in their pursuit of national liberation, reconstruction, and national re-unification, and a beginning for the people of the world on the road to justice and freedom.

Tran Tu is a Vietnamese student in Montreal, and editor of Viet Nam News and Reports, a Montreal bi-weekly.

Could you repeat that, please?

"The world is no more free of unscrupulous and vindictive employers than it is of unscrupulous workers."

"The real cause of today's high unemployment is simply a lack of jobs."

—W.A. Wilson, The Montreal Star,
January 22, 1973.
